WEYMOUTH FAIR BIG SUCCESS

Assures Aid for Storm Sufferers—Boston American Handicap Won by Ahokar

Announcement today by the general committee of the Weymouth field day held Saturday afternoon and evening in aid of the storm sufferers and featured by the Boston American tennis handicap, shows that the event netted a handsome financial return for those who lost their homes and property.

Thousands of people witnessed the running events, horse races and the ball game which were leading features.

They roared applause as Urh Abokar, running for the Harja Athletic Club of Quincy, and a practically unknown runner, captured the first prize in the Boston American ten-mile handicap. The race was run in 56 minutes, 45 seconds.

Eleven athletes, including Cal Linder, who ran in the recent Olympic marathon, competed for the Boston American cups and medals. The event closed the field day contests.

Ideal weather conditions contributed to the marked success of the field day.

The runners were handicapped: George V. Brown, secretary of the Boston Athletic Association, and in charge of the athletic events; A. Flanders of Technology captured the prize. Rulon Oman of the Dorchester A. C. ran last.

The motion picture separate ground out their films as the lead in the column left the tape. Will Himes, W. Brooks, H. Bourgauss of Queen Quality A. C.; L. Lebowitz Quincy and J. W. Lee of Wakeen started with a six minute lead.

They had passed around the course on their first lap when Ahokar, J. J. Dacey were sent after them with a five and a half minute handicap. Good old Glenning, runner up in the Queen Quality colors, followed with a two and a half minute handicap and after him with a two minute handicap went Carl Linder, also of the Huria A. C. who finished in teenth in the recent Olympic meet. Then came Flanders and Ohman, and the entire list of entries was unimpressive.

Ahokar, at the end of five miles had the lead and he never lost it. Although Flanders, the Texan runner, climbed after him with a stride.

After the smart horse racing was finished, Louis Guertin, champion professional high jumper, gave an exhibition on the track.

America's Fisheries—An Undeveloped Industry of Great Possibilities

In its rich fisheries the United States possesses an undeveloped natural resource which needs only organization, capital and brains to make it one of the nation's greatest industries.

The American fisheries have hitherto been conducted so inefficiently that fish as an important food staple has failed to win the nation-wide popularity it deserves. To credit has been the organization of our fisheries and the regulation of their distribution, that fish in sufficient quantities and of good quality was being unobtainable regularly by much of our inland population.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries states that there is a huge unsatisfied demand for fish, especially in the Middle West and South. An enormously rich field awaits the wide-awake concern which enters the fish industry with the proper equipment and capital. In England where twenty-five years ago the fisheries were in as chaotic a state as here now, more capital is probably employed in the fisheries than in the American beef industry. The American beef supply is decreasing and the consumption of fish is increasing. The problems of handling and distributing fish and beef are identical, and progressive concerns are meeting them the right way, equipped with ample capital, fleets of steam trawlers, big central plants and excellent merchandising systems. All honor to these companies for their far-sighted progressiveness.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

Business Responding Slowly to Optimistic Factors

Worst of Money Pinch Now Seems Past and Railroad Situation Has Improved; Showing of Port of Boston Disappointing

There are plenty of reasons why business in New England should revive from lethargy. The very factors which forced a readjustment to lower levels are now improving and should instill confidence. Reopening of many textile mills and shoe factories indicates that a better sentiment is prevailing.

Transportation is one of the most important factors in the revival of business. The reopening of many textile mills and shoe factories indicates that a better sentiment is prevailing.

The Federal Reserve Board saw the need of readjustment for safety and began forcing its credit policy and has been successful in its efforts. The effect is now being felt in the business world.

FASTER MOVES PREDICTED.
Leading bankers are now predicting a revival in the money market. The reopening of many textile mills and shoe factories indicates that a better sentiment is prevailing.

COFFEE PRICES DROP SHARPLY

Five-Cent Drop at Wholesale and Still Lower Market Expected

Coffee has dropped an average of five cents a pound in wholesale prices during the past month and dealers say that by the turn of the year still lower prices may be expected. There has been a proportionate decrease in retail prices.

One of the largest dealers in New England today told the American that "the bottom has dropped out of the market and there are no signs of a comeback." He said that Boston coffee for which he paid twenty-five cents a pound a year ago, are now being sold at fourteen cents before being roasted.

This firm has reduced its wholesale prices five cents. A leading brand that sold at forty-seven cents in July is now forty-five; a forty-cent brand is now thirty-five and a thirty-five-cent brand is now thirty-two.

"Consumers should be sure to mind," he said, "that coffee roasted last month was supplied at least three months ago. The coffee that we are now supplying was supplied at least three months ago. The coffee that we are now supplying was supplied at least three months ago."

There is talk of the Brazilian government buying up the surplus crop of coffee and holding it for export. It is said that the government is now buying up the surplus crop of coffee and holding it for export.

That is one reason for the drop. Another is a decrease in freight rates, and still another general pessimism in the business world. Coffee has been affected by the same conditions that hit leather, wool, sugar, cotton and other commodities.

But, many coffee importers have suffered big losses in the past few months. It is said that the coffee trade is now in a state of depression and that the coffee trade is now in a state of depression.

League Would Bind Us to Help England Keep India by the Use of Opium

How many Americans know what Great Britain is doing to three hundred million people of India? How many people of America know that Great Britain is guilty of conduct toward three hundred million helpless people which, for deliberate, cold-blooded, long continued atrocity is probably unequalled by any savage people in all history?

How many American people realize the moral horror which would be involved in our undertaking by Article X. of the League of Nations to guarantee Great Britain's possession of India?

We refer to opium. We refer to Great Britain's responsibility for the use of opium in India. We refer to her deliberate, persistent and horribly successful attempt to poison three hundred million people and to render them helpless against her exploitation, by the use of opium.

Great Britain conducts a government monopoly of opium in India. In many of her Eastern provinces more than half her revenue comes from the sale of opium.

India is a famine-stricken country. The British government will advance money without charges to any man who will plant poppy from which opium is extracted. In India men and women and children die by the millions every few years of starvation because not enough land is planted with the necessities of life to sustain the immense population.

This famine could have been avoided if the British government had helped the poor Indian to irrigate his land and to plant his crops efficiently. But the British government lends money without interest for planting and harvesting of poppy which it takes to its government manufacturing establishments and then turns into opium and distributes to its government licensed traders, who distribute it to the poor people of India.

In the last twenty years the sale of opium has increased 67 per cent. in India. What a dreadful spectacle is presented to an East Indian when he reads in a British newspaper of raids upon opium joints in England by the British police and the arrest and rigid punishment of men who sell and of men who smoke or use the deadly drug and then he remembers that in his own poor country this same government by this same drug is destroying the moral fibre of his people, both for the purpose of revenue and for the purpose of maintaining an easy control of an enormous body of human beings.

This control by Great Britain over India is one of the things that we guarantee in Article X. of the League of Nations if we should enter the league upon Mr. Wilson's and Mr. Cox's terms.

In later editorials we shall discuss in more detail the British opium monopoly, not only in India, but in China, in the Straits Settlements, in Borneo, in Guinea and in every other place where Great Britain has power. It is probably the most horrid story in modern history, as the war which Great Britain waged against China to compel her to use opium was one of the most horrid wars, if not the most horrid war, in the records of mankind.

Depositors May Feel Safe With Bay State Banks

Those who deposit their money in our Massachusetts banks should not be at all anxious concerning its safety on account of the recent closing of two banks.

The safeguards which are thrown around the banking institutions of Massachusetts make it almost impossible for a depositor to lose his money. We have a bank commissioner with great powers of supervision, and the national banks have bank examiners of equal powers. These authorities keep constantly in touch with the affairs of the banking institutions, watch their investments and keep an eye on their profit and loss accounts, and allow nothing in their books to escape them. It is their duty, and so far as we know, it is a duty which they scrupulously perform, to shut down a bank the moment it gets near the danger point.

In the present bank commissioner, Mr. Allen, the depositors of the State have a guardian upon whom they can depend. We should all keep it in mind, when the bank commissioner closes the doors of a banking institution that it is not like locking the barn door after the horse is stolen. It is not after the bank depositors have lost their money that the bank commissioner closes the bank. It is before they lose their money. He does not allow the bank to reach conditions by which the depositor may lose.

The bank commissioner's aim is to close a bank before the liabilities exceed the assets, not counting the double liability of the stockholders as an asset. This double liability, then, is always an anchor to the windward. It is always a reserve on which the stockholders can draw in case the other assets are exhausted without being sufficient to meet the liabilities.

Thus it is that the depositors do not lose their money when a bank is closed. The only danger to the depositors is from their own panic-stricken conduct. If depositors become frightened concerning the condition of a bank, and rush in to take out their money, they do something as dangerous to themselves as when those in a theatre which has caught fire crowd and jam and fight to get out, thus blocking the door and wedging themselves all in; or when the passengers on a leading ship rush headlong into the boats and capsize them all.

HIGH PAY AND HIGHER LIVING
Are you one of those complaining individuals who rail about the prices you pay for everything you buy and compare the prices ten years ago with what you can get today for the same money?

You pay little thought to the difference in your wages then and now. Be honest; would you be willing to work for the wages you received ten years ago, even if the necessities of life were as low priced now as then?

Isn't it a fact that you are living better than you did ten years ago? Isn't it possible for you now under your increased wages to possess comforts which your wages ten years ago would not permit you to enjoy?

Possibly you worked for $15 or $20 a week once and now you receive $30 or $40.

If you were as careful now as then in your expenditure wouldn't you be better off now than when you had the small wage or salary?

You are accumulating your money (to know it is money) and you enjoy more comforts in life.

Why have stirring up strife among your fellows about this high living cost when you really are living better?

OR, SIBERIA IS NO PLACE FOR A QUIET HOME LIFE.

"The blow has fell! I fear I've got to throw out her whole fourteen children, and I may even have to throw out my bride, too." So saying our hero gazed gloomily at the bunch of hungry wolves pursuing his sledge with growls of "Woof!" "Woof!" and other expressions habitually used by wolves. Wolves have no manners, anyhow. They never had any bringing up. "If I throw 'em out, even the wolves won't be able to swallow 'em, that's one comfort!" resumed our hero. Hardly had he spoken when, without the slightest warning, a frightful explosion

More Truth Than Poetry

The Pessimists' Chorus

By S. E. KISER

DING, dong, ding, dong! Hear the avails ring;
The pessimists are busy, they are knocking everything.
It is ding, ding, ding, and it's dong, dong, dong;
The world is full of trouble, all our plans are going wrong.

We are told by politicians that the other side is to blame
For the burdens we are bearing and the troubles that they name.
Never resting, never ceasing,
And with hate that keeps increasing,
They insist that we are going to the very depths of shame.

DING, dong, ding, dong! Panic in the air;
Bolshevism's gaining, you can find it everywhere.
It is clang, clang, clang, and it's bing, bing, bing!
Nothing's as it should be—not a solitary thing!

War is raging on in Europe, men are striking over here;
The bankers count their money, and their souls are filled with fear.
Every pessimist is knocking,
Public confidence is rocking,
And the only thing that's certain is that living still is dear.

DING, dong, ding, dong! Trade is going flat;
They've got to raise the price of coal—please make a note of that!
It is dong, dong, dong, and it's clang, clang, clang!
Hear the landlords' tale of woe, let the public hear!

The clang is never-ending where the heavy sledges swing;
All day long we have to listen to the ding-a-dong-a-ding;
Every fool has dark predictions
Touching on the deep afflictions
And the riots and the terror that the future is to bring.

Every pessimist is knocking,
Public confidence is rocking,
And the only thing that's certain is that living still is dear.

DING, dong, ding, dong! Trade is going flat;
They've got to raise the price of coal—please make a note of that!
It is dong, dong, dong, and it's clang, clang, clang!
Hear the landlords' tale of woe, let the public hear!
